

Figure 5

Steps to effectuate web site	1) Change the template HTML file. 2) Deploy changed template HTML file file to the server.	1) Change the template HTML file to delete dynamic element. 2) Deploy changed template HTML file to the server. Figure 6	1) Change the template HTML file to add element. 2) Revise the myclass.java to add new dynamic content changes. 3) Compile the myclass.java file into the myclass.class; 4) Deploy changed foo.class and changed template HTML file to the server. 5) Restart the server.
Steps to effectuate web site modification with Enhydra	 Change the template HTML file. Recompile the changed template HTML file with XMLC to create foo.java Compile foo.java into the foo.class; Link the changed foo.class with myclass.class Deploy linked file to the server. Restart the server. 	 Change the template HTML file to delete element. Recompile the changed template HTML file with XMLC to create foo.java Compile foo.java into the foo.class; Revise the myclass.java to remove deleted dynamic content portions Compile the myclass.java file into myclass.class Link the changed foo.class with the myclass.class Deploy linked file to the server. 	1) Change the template HTML file to add element. 2) Recompile the changed template HTML file with XMLC to create foo.java 3) Compile foo.java into the foo.class; 4) Revise the myclass.java file into the myclass.class; 5) Compile the myclass.java file into the myclass.class; 6) Link the changed foo.class with the myclass.class; 7) Deploy linked file to the server. 8) Restart the server. 2) Revise the template HTML file to add element. 2) Revise the myclass.java file into the myclass.class; 3) Compile the myclass.java file into the myclass.class; 4) Deploy changed foo.class and template HTML file to the server. 5) Restart the server. 8) Restart the server.
Type of web site modification.	Simple change to static template HTML file.	Deletion of existing dynamic element.	Addition of a new dynamic element.